English text:

Today's rioting in Washington, D.C. was illegal, inexcusable, and disgraceful. As President-elect Biden said, it did not represent the vast majority of the American people. Many of us believe that President Trump's repeated lies about non-existent electoral fraud and his incitement to "wild" protests were directly responsible for today's events. With only 14 days left in Trump's term of office, it may be impractical to hold him legally responsible. Certainly another impeachment proceeding in that short time-span seems to be impossible. Invoking the 25th Amendment to the Constitution, which would remove the President and elevate Vice President Pence to the presidency, is theoretically feasible, but also improbable. What is certain, however, is that history will judge Donald Trump to have been an anti-democratic, would-be authoritarian – a miserable failure as president who was only capable of sowing chaos.
