

Gregory Vistica is the Chairman and CEO of Washington Media Group, Inc., an award-winning communications, advocacy, advertising, and research firm. Mr. Vistica provides discreet communication services to Fortune 100, startups, multinational corporations, and non-profit clients worldwide. A respected crisis management and media turn-around expert, he has led integrated communication campaigns to support and protect public policy goals and corporate and individual reputations. He advises C-suite executives, general counsels, and regulatory officials in leading defense, financial, health, water, and energy companies.

He is an author and former award-winning investigative reporter for Newsweek, The New York Times Magazine, The Washington Post, and was a producer for 60 Minutes.

The New York Times, in nominating Mr. Vistica for a Pulitzer Prize for exposing Senator Bob Kerrey's role in a Vietnam massacre, called his work "enterprising reporting at its finest." In addition to being selected as a Pulitzer Prize finalist in the national reporting category, he has won a Peabody, and a George Polk award for breaking the Tailhook scandal, which led to historic reforms in the military. He was part of the Newsweek team that won a National Magazine Award, was nominated for an Emmy by CBS, received a Heywood Broun honorable mention, and was a finalist in the International Consortium for Investigative Journalists competition. Investigative Reporters and Editors (IRE) also selected his work for finalist honors in its journalism awards. Brill's Content described his journalism as "nuanced and meticulous."

He has written extensively about CIA culture and covert operations in Afghanistan, Haiti, Yugoslavia, and the Middle East, and covered a range of topics from counterterrorism, transportation, and the FBI to campaign finance irregularities, war crimes, and street gangs in the U.S. military.

He is the author of "The Education of Lieutenant Kerrey," a book about Senator Kerrey and Vietnam, and "Fall From Glory: The Men Who Sank the U.S. Navy," a contemporary history. He was also a staff assistant to Congressman Tom Lantos from California. A native of the San Francisco Peninsula, Mr. Vistica lives in the Washington, D.C. area.